THE DAILY CONSTITUTION.

VOL. XI.

ATLANTA, GA. THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 8, 1878.

THE WOMAN DID IT. THE EFFECT OF THE HEATED TALK IN MACON.

A Lady, thinking that there are no such things as love and marriage, thinks to herself, "They are the tools of the up-holders."

Special dispatch to The Constitution.

MACON, GA., August 7.—Colonel H.
H. Jones, of the Macon Telegraph and Monitor.

The Fifth District.

MONROE.

The delegates to the Barnesville convention are S. D. Mobley, J. R. Rawls, A. J. Phineas and R. C. McClellan. They are pronounced Canadians.

HENRY.

The delegates from this county are Dr. F. A.
Eaton and W. H. Bauman, with Dr. J. C. Wyne and T. H. Stellwagen as alternates. They were instructed to cast their ballots for John D. Stewart, "one of the last hope of our country."
CONCERNING THE FATHER OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.—In the event of his withdrawal to vote for Milton A. Cudworth.

THE UNIVERSITY.

How the Commencement is Progressing.
ATLANTA, GA., August 6, 1878.

Entered Correspondence:—One telegraphic correspondent has informed us of the distribution of the sophomore pledge medals to Mr. H. C. Gandy, of Mr. O. N. Hooper, of Houston county, and second medal, O. C. Moore, of DeKalb county.

Of course there were some disappointed among the speakers and their friends. Each of the former, however, probably comforts himself with the reflection that he just did his duty.

To day the junior speakers original speeches. I append a programme they all well.

ADDRESSES.

C. B. Chapman, Fulton county; vir-tuous life of natural man; prosperity.

W. W. Landin, Barnesville; utility,
H. B. Russell, Clarke county; oratory

the product of trying times.

A. W. Smith, Atlanta; action and contemplation.

B. E. Addles, Monroe; genius, labor success.

W. E. Smith, Decatur county; book binding.

G. Harridge, Savannah; original thought exhausted.

J. H. Armstrong, Augusta; life not measured by days, but deeds.

M. G. Bayne, Crawford county; excused.

J. H. Napier, Twiggs county; our national debt.

Immediately after the junior exhibition, Major Joseph Grinnell, of Augusta, delivered the oration before the alumni.

It was a most scholarly, elegant and eloquent address. The fine personal appearance of the orator gave great effect to his graceful delivery.

I desire to state in this connection that the audience and the most shamefully disorderly and grossly indecent which I have ever seen or even heard of. The speaker could not be heard to day more than six feet from the stage.

The alumni met at 4 p.m.,
and selected Davenport Jackson, Esq.,
of Augusta, a trustee, vice Thaddeus
H. Koll, of Macon, whose term had expired.

They passed a resolution memorializing the legislature to allow the agricultural society to elect four trustees of
the university.

The trustees have proceeded so far in the work of reorganization as to elect Dr. Mell chancellor. They are in session to-night. Governor Colquitt appeared and took his seat to-day.

Lastly—the Clinch base ball club of Augusta and the Pop and Go club of Clarke county played a match game this afternoon at the fair grounds, and the Pop and Go won "by 12 to 7"— whatever that means.

The results in Carroll County.

ATLANTA, GA., August 7, 1878.

Entered Correspondence: Carroll country held a meeting yesterday and from 300 to 1,000 persons were present.

The meeting was organized by electing
W. W. Pitts chairman and E. R. Sharp secretary.

The meeting soon adjourned
to hear the speeches from Harris, Smith and Tuggee. After the speaking, the meeting adjourned to order it by W. W. Pitts, and consider the resolutions enacted and some confusion was the result. The chairman withdrew and Hon. H. Hogan was elected chairman pro tem., and the meeting proceeded in considerable confusion. Mr. J. L. Cobb introduced the following resolutions:
that we will endeavor to obtain a reformed system of government for Crete.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Mr.
Cobb put the motion and the resolutions were adopted. Mr. E. R. Sharp told the writer that Cobb's resolutions were put and adopted, but he (Sharp) thought it was a farce. After this, the confusion grew worse and confused, and it was decided that Harris' friends claim that it was done to prevent the election of Crete.

The reader is invited to poll the moral of this incident in the hall.

BORDABOUT IN GEORGIA.

The authorities of Athens allow the poor little Martin to be shot in the city.

Colonel E. Clarence Callaway, of the Kimball, is making arrangements to attend the state fair at Macon.

Dr. H. H. Carlton has retired from the editorial management of the Atlanta Banner, and is succeeded by Mr. W. F. Conine, a journalist of experience. Dr. Carlton has made quite a reputation as an editor. He still retains the proprietorship of the Banner.

Mr. Hugh Weddell, of Savannah, who was recently discharged from the United States treasury department by Gen. Sherman because he refused to contribute to the republican campaign fund, is to be appointed to a position in the postoffice department.

"Will the people," anxiously inquires the Athens Watchman, "allow THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION to force a man upon them?" Pray what people and what man? The meaning of Mr. Speer in this instance is almost as mysterious as the identity of the P. G. D.

The Athens Watchman says: "The CONSTITUTION hasn't the backbone to declare for the gifted Hammond in its own district." Do you really consider it a question of backbone, Mr. Speer?

As a representative democratic newspaper THE CONSTITUTION has no right to declare for any democrat pending a nomination, especially where several good men are aspirants. It is the duty of THE CONSTITUTION to rally and support the action of the convention.

A SKELETON IN THE CLOSET.

"BRANDON COYLE! ARE YOU MAD?"

She had stolen up behind him noiselessly, she had snatched the loaded pistol from his desperate hand and hurled it through the open window into the bay before him. And not one instant too soon did she leave him from the crime of self-destruction.

He started facing each other with eyes flaming defiance.

How like, yet unlike, were these nice, beautiful creatures—twin sister and brother!

With her slender, well-rounded, limous form; with her small, fine features and clear, deadly-pale yellow face, darkened by great, deep, hollow black eyes; the whole overshadowed by heavy, clustering auburn curls—a subtle, winsome face.

His was a tall, slender figure, and more supple than another human snake, of a little larger growth, with a pauper complexion, dark eyes and dark hair.

They were the orphan niece and nephew of Christopher Coyle, Esquire, and old bachelor living on his ancient patrimonial estate of Caveland in the North of England.

Both were pale and paling at each other a full minute in silent menace. Then both spoke at once:

"Aspirita!"

"Brandon!"

"How dared you stop me?"

"How dared you raise your hand against your own wife?" he cried, with a groan of agony.

"I do so! What do I please?" he answered sulkily.

"So do I—except—except to rush from life to death—from the known to the unknown!" she retorted, solemnly.

"There can be no more perfect period than that I suffer now! Why did you stop me?" he cried, with a groan of agony.

"It's the exact name of his father."

"He knows that, does he?"

"Yes, he knows that; but that is absurd."

"Then we will try to enlighten him!" exclaimed Aspirita, with a blaze of indignation from her big black eyes.

"We do know what this means then," said Brandon, starting.

"I do not!"

"You must stop the marriage, Brandon!"

"Stop the marriage? I wish I could!"

"Stop the marriage? How am I to do that? I pray you!"

"Come! Come and sit down on the sofa by me, and I will tell you what I do to break off this marriage, near as it is, and to win the bride for yourself, much as she is now devoted to her advanced lover," whispered the girl.

The suicidal phrenzy in him was laid for the moment, even though it might return.

"Now attend to me, Brandon. Before he becomes your successor rival in the favor of Lady Aspirita Montjones, Valdimir Despade was your most intimate friend, was he not?" inquired Aspirita.

"Of course he was," exclaimed Brandon, grinding his teeth.

"We were in his entire confidence!"

"Yes, he was."

"You have often heard him regret, deplore, the unfathomable mystery that hangs over his own and his sister's childhood?"

"Oh, to be sure. Haven't I told you so ten enough?"

"And his rather resent his guardian, Lord Beaudeneve's reticence on this subject?"

"Yes, yes; but what has all this to do with the question of this detestable marriage?" exclaimed Brandon, impatiently.

"It has everything to do with stopping him. But you must be patient, my son. Calm yourself, and collect your thoughts; for I must put you through a cross-examination and then feel my way."

"I don't understand you."

"N? But you will as I go on. Tell me, just exactly how much Valdimir Despade really does know of his early life?" He had told me, I suppose."

"You are very much mistaken. He has heard nothing. Lord Beaudeneve, the only person in possession of the facts, firmly refuse to speak one word on the subject!"

Lord Beaudeneve's reserve is very much to do with."

"What do you say?"

"Lord Beaudeneve's reserve is very merciful to Valdimir Despade and his sister."

"What do you mean, Aspirita?"

"I will explain presently. But you will tell me all Valdimir Despade has told you of his early life, Brandon."

"Let me think. Oh! He remembers living with his mother and his ill-tempered, very poor lodgings, in the narrow streets of a great city, whose name he has forgotten, even if he ever learned it."

"Was it in this country?"

"No, for he crossed water to come here."

"In France, then?"

"Because, if you do, the earl will stop the marriage, for Lady Aspirita's sake, and then all Lady Aspirita's sympathies will be with her betrothed lover, and she will remain faithful to him, and perhaps—ever close with him!"

"This is true! What, then, would you advise me to do with this paper?"

"Take it to Valdimir Despade! Be kind of him off expressed desire to see his father, the elder Valdimir Despade, whom, however, he does not remember ever to have seen. But his mother never held up her head again, and pray to the Lord to take them out of this world, and save them from the evil to come."

"Ah!" gasped Aspirita, as she listened to every word of this little story.

"At length the mother took to her bed, from which she never arose again. She ministered care and eat by her son, Valdimir Despade, who did not know who he was until afterwards. Lord Beaudeneve had this mother and her children immediately removed to a more comfortable house, the place of residence of the Earl of Arundel. Another day a gentle man arrived, a stranger, who afterwards proved to be Lord Beaudeneve."

"Well, Brandon why don't you go on, eagerly demanded the attentive Brandon, that her brother passed by.

"I can't tell you, sir, what happened to my brother when he had told me of this story. Oh! I did not know who he was until afterwards."

"Then followed the funeral and the burial. Another day a gentle man arrived, a stranger, who afterwards proved to be Lord Beaudeneve."

"And she has never told her brother of your name, you presume?"

"Who? Aspirita? Aspirita, boarder of mine. He is the master of my house now. I have heard of him, but I do not know who he is."

"So much the better. Then your way is clear. Go to him as his old friend, the strength of your old mutual affection, and tell him, with as much tact as you can, that you are distinctly his mother's peaceful death, while Lord Beaudeneve stood with Vivienne in his arms and Valdimir by his side, promising the dying woman to be a father to them while she should live. Then followed the funeral and the burial. Another day a gentle man arrived, a stranger, who afterwards proved to be Lord Beaudeneve."

"Did his sister—did Vivienne collect nothing of this?"

"Nothing. Her earliest memory comes from their life at Clouland, while their guardian took them immediately on their arrival in England."

"And we know all the rest from hearay—how the bachelor, Lord Beaudeneve, represented these children to his neighbors as his little cousins and wards; how he sent Valdimir to school, and Aspirita to Paris, and took her to London and had her presented to the Queen. All this we know of these two individuals, whose earliest days were passed in a squilid tenement-house in a foreign city, all vaguely remebered by Valdimir."

"Yes, I would. I am not Lady Aspirita Montjones. I am Aspirita Coyle, the orphan, dependent on my bachelor uncle, whose estates will all go to you. Besides, I love him," added the gold beauty, without a moment's hesitation.

"No! for myself alone! I might be capable of killing him to prevent another woman having him!"

"Bravo, Aspirita! But oh! the fate for him that over your sting should strike him."

"He is now, and expects your mission to Clouland; it is time, unless you would prefer a dramatic forbidding of the bars at the very altar tomorrow!" said Aspirita, not a whit discomposed by the questionable compliments of her brother.

"He must be soothed, for he cannot be so through his mother, since there have been no bars." They are to be married by special license," said Brandon, almost gayly, so much was he elated at the prospect of preventing the marriage.

"They were to have been married, you mean! But they certainly are not to be now," amended Aspirita.

"The last and most important point is concerned, they should be informed of their changed prospects," added Brandon Coyle, with a smile; and, rising, with a bow he left his sister, and, a few minutes later, departed on his detectable errand.

Aspirita Coyle looked after him a great while, and then, with a smile, turned to the bars at the altar, the bars at the very altar tomorrow!" said Aspirita, not a whit discomposed by the questionable compliments of her brother.

Aspirita put her hand in her pocket and drew forth a folded newspaper, and read it, fidgeting with age, and a work around his creases that is threatened to fall to pieces on being opened.

"What is this? I demand Brandon, reaching for his hand.

"Don't touch it yet. It is the New Orleans Courier of sixteen years ago. Open it, and see what it says."

"It says—'I am sorry to inform you that the exact name of the father is Valdimir Despade, M. D., Professor of Medicine and Therapeutics, and Physician to the King of France.'"

"It is the exact name of his father?"

A STRONG POINT

In the new "Domestic" Machine is the silence during operation. This, and the light running of the engine, are the chief features of the machine, but not least important are its low price and sterling qualities which command a wide sale throughout the country. A few machines will change the best machine in town.

MADE STRONGER

By our constantly increasing sales to cities who have heretofore hesitated about using a machine until they saw the "Domestic."

OUR TRADE AND FAIR PAPER.

PUBLISHER'S ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE CONSTITUTION Trade and Fair issue will be issued on the first day of September. It will consist of eight large pages, or double the size of the Sunday edition. We expect to print 10,000 copies of it. We desire all the aid in the way of information that we can get, for the interest of the convention. The Constitution will be present at a complete summary of the trade not only of Atlanta but of north Georgia. The growth of Atlanta will be fully set forth, and for that purpose we invite contractors and builders to supply us with all the facts in relation to new buildings that they possess. The extent and nature of their trade will be presented, supported by facts carefully collated.

Our page of this great edition will be devoted to the premiums list of the North Georgia fair association, and to other matters relating to the coming fair. As a Trade and Fair paper, the edition will offer unusual attractions to advertisers, especially to jobbing merchants and manufacturers. In order to present in a creditable shape the advantages that our stores and factories offer we desire all the time that is possible. Orders for space should therefore be given within the course of the coming week. If our patrons will be prompt in this respect, we promise them a Trade and Fair paper that they will be glad to distribute among their patrons.

Mr O B Richardson, Mrs N C Snow and Miss M. A. Shaver, one of the editors of the Convoy Weekly, were in the city yesterday, and made a short visit to the former.

—A Mr H Colquitt and Hon Chas J Jenkins have been elected honorary members by the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

—Mr H H Miller gave the city to-day for New York on a mail of recommendations, with which he had been connected in New York, in his purchase a superb sum of silver goods for the fair trade.

Mr John M Graham, the efficient stenographer of this circuit and one of the most promising young men of our city, left yesterday afternoon for New York, to go into the business of the law.

—The Atlanta Journal, the organ of the Northern Press Association, was at Homestead, Pa., yesterday morning, for the spring for the press conference.

—Mr Oliver H Jones, the young attorney for the defense, will remain here for a few days, before returning to the Holman springs. We hope that the health of Mr Jones will improve rapidly, and that he will be welcome to our city in the near future.

The other benefits of it are social and romantic, the hotel, back as it does, far recollections of the old days when knightly man and "lady fair" enjoyed the exhilarating pleasures of the chase in the seafaring days of the pirate.

Archery is receiving considerable attention in Atlanta. The sport has much to commend it. Practically it gives the body graceful motion, and exercises the muscles of the arm very much, giving co-ordination to the vision.

—One of the two or three good archery clubs in our city bears the name of the "Hawthorn Archery Club." It had a meeting Monday night at the residence of Mrs. Force, on Mitchell street.

—Billiard matches are not very frequent in our city.

—The fair already looks like a big success.

—Watermelons are cheaper here than in the Angels.

—Atlanta has quite a number of fast horses.

—Billiard matches are not very frequent in our city.

—The business end of a wasp and that of a dog are not located in the same place.

—Five die houses in Atlanta made a noise as we went past.

—The business of Atlanta will nearly double what it was last year.

—Give us a few more greenbacks and no more greenback clubs.

—The Atlanta fire department has four steamers and another in the near future.

—Many of our streets are being paved with asphalt.

—A hundred dollars will place our fair grounds in some order.

—The thermometer goes up and goes down.

—Our county roads are fine pleasure drives.

—The people of Atlanta feel the necessity of shade trees.

—The mineral springs at West End are very popular.

—A ball—very select—came off at the old brewery a few nights ago.

—A barbecue was given yesterday at the old brewery from the city.

—The runaway horses of our city have the whip手的 employment.

—The prize drill meet Tuesday night is all the talk.

—When Ed. Baldwin gets fairly to work he is going to be a most power house.

—This Congregation's trade paper to be issued Saturday, 1st, will be a smash hit.

—The Sunday school celebration at Oglethorpe park this afternoon will be quite a success.

—The fine music of the post band is much enjoyed by the residents of that vicinity.

—Roberts, the keeper of the park, thinks of planting crocus and tulips in the pleasure grounds under his charge.

—If this dog car would work around and kill off a few more dogs these pests would not be so numerous.

—Several hydrants should be placed in every street.

—Mr. Clint Taylor thinks that the display of live stock at our fair will be the largest ever known in Georgia.

—From all accounts from every part of the state large crowds are coming to attend our fair.

—A race between a carrier pigeon and a man kicked by a mile would be very close if the pigeon is given half the start.

—The annual parade of the colored military companies of the city on the 10th instant will be quite interesting.

—The best drilled men in Atlanta will be in the contest for the $50 cash and the $50 orange next Tuesday night.

SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE.

Meeting in Chattanooga.

First day's programme.

The Chattanooga Times of yesterday contains a report of the first day's proceedings of the Southern Educational conference which met in that city on Wednesday.
